What SME leaders should do to create the future workplace?

- As the landscape of work and workplaces continually evolves, SMEs need to adapt to emerging trends, technological advancements, and changing workforce expectations to remain competitive, and drive a productive and engaging workplace.
- Embrace remote and hybrid work models: The future of work probably will involve flexibility, and remote or hybrid work models have become increasingly prevalent not just in large businesses.
- SME owners should embrace these models, offering employees the option to work from anywhere, either part-time or full-time.
- This approach not only expands the talent pool by allowing recruitment from diverse geographical areas but also promotes work-life balance and enhances employee wellbeing.
- As an example, take Buffer, a social media management platform that operates with a fully remote team distributed across various countries. By leveraging remote work, Buffer attracts top talent and promotes a flexible work culture that aligns with the future of work.

Tata Sons chairman N Chandra addresses employees, warns of disruption and volatility

- He said India's future is bright as the country fared better than most others this year.
- The country's economy is thriving and gross domestic product (GDP) is on track to double to $7 trillion over the next five years.
- Technologies such as generative AI (GenAI) is a potential antidote.
- "Looking ahead of 2024, we must be prepared for more disruption and volatility. The complexity of global governance will reach new heights as the world finds new rules to protect data privacy, curb inflation, reduce carbon emissions and perceptions of AI risk," Chandrasekaran said in his New Year message to employees.

Government has strictly no plans to put MEP on all agri-commodities: Commerce Ministry

- The government on Friday said there are "strictly" no plans to impose the minimum export price (MEP) on all agricultural products.
- Additional Secretary in the Department of Commerce Rajesh Agrawal said that there is no such intention of the government to look into exports of all agri products.
- "Just want to clarify that the government has no intention to put in MEP on all agri products or review all agri products from the export perspective.

- He said that the committee getting a wider mandate does not mean that "the committee is there to look into each agri product and start recommending MEP for that".
- He informed that despite banning exports of non-basmati white rice, India has allocated 13 lakh tonnes of rice for exports to over 14 countries for their food security issues.
